Best Places to Work 2020: The finalists

Here are the 100 top companies in our annual feature.

Agency H5

Last year, Agency H5 celebrated the one-year anniversary of its rebranding from Henson Consulting. They have more reason to celebrate this year.

Here are the 100 top companies in our annual feature.

What makes for a great workplace? Employees have lots to say on the matter, and we listened again this year for our annual Best Places to Work feature. In this installment, 189 companies participated, and 162 were good enough to make the list. We named 100 winners.

To identify the top 100 workplaces, Best Companies Group, an independent workplace excellence research firm, conducted a two-part survey. Part one was an employer questionnaire, which gathered information about benefits, policies, practices and other general information. Part two was a confidential 78-question employee survey used to evaluate local employees' workplace experience and culture. BCG collected data from the companies in October. The Best Places program was open to all organizations with at least 25 employees, for-profit and not-for-profit.

Here are the finalists, presented in alphabetical order. Stay tuned for a ranked list, divided into small, medium and large companies, to be presented online April 17 and in the print edition on April 20.
